

Indonesian connections.

DCUK are passionate about managing our interactions and relationships with our Indonesian friends correctly.

We're also currently working out the details of a paid-for medical insurance plan that will be offered free to every full-time colleague employed at our Indonesian supplier.

In a country where few understand the importance of health care and even fewer can afford it, we are really excited to be in a position to make such a meaningful impact in this way.

In addition...

- ✓ For over 10 years, we have enjoyed a positive long-standing partnership with two locally owned and reputable craft companies in Indonesia.
- ✓ We visit Indonesia twice a year (unfortunately not during the current COVID crisis) and have many regular conversations with them every month.
- ✓ Many Indonesian employees are based in their homes, enjoying a positive work/life balance with their families whilst continuing to keep traditional craft skills alive.
- ✓ This is the key thing for us too. By providing safe, regular and reliable opportunities for our Indonesian colleagues to do what they do, we are helping to retain generations-old skills and culture that would otherwise be lost if they all worked in manufacturing or mass-production factory set ups.
- ✓ Offering a positive and culturally rich alternative is important to us... and it's better for Indonesia's future.
- ✓ And we are proud that everyone involved in the painting and sculpting of our characters can relish the opportunity to use their traditional skills and family-learnt training in a productive way.
